

Houston Farmer Becomes Insane

PETERS OF WICKSBURG LOSES MIND—TRIES TO KILL HIS WIFE

Sheriff T. W. Butler this morning received a telephone message from Wicksburg, in the western part of the county, to the effect that William Peters, a well known member of that community, had become crazy and was attempting the lives of several of his family and neighbors.

Peters last night hit his wife in the back with a chair, painfully injuring her, and had it not been for the glancing way in which the blow was given, would have probably seriously injured her. The air splintered against the walls of the house.

Since that time Peters has been under guard, but his guards have been unable to subdue him or get near him.

A farmer riding by there this morning on a bicycle was attacked by Peters, who was armed with a broken handled pitchfork and small chop ax. Peters met him in the middle of the road and before he could alight, the insane man was stabbing at him with the sharp pronged fork, but the farmer managed to overpower him and id him of his deadly weapons. Fortunately he received no injuries, although the pitchfork was abbed through his trousers leg and into the bicycle seat. As the farmer rode off, Peters threw the ax at him, narrowly missing his head. Peters then sat down, and he latest reports state that he is practically subdued, but still in a crazy state.

Peters, according to those who notified the officers, is a prosperous farmer and a leading churchman of that community, and when in his right mind is a good man. For the past ten years he has been suffering with these spells, and until this time, has always been in a good humor while in this condition, and in fact, very affectionate and at times very ambitious. It is true, however, he has been in the humor to kill and has attempted to kill all those

Will Search For The South Pole

Harry Payne Whitney Announces His Intention to Sail Next July or August

New Orleans, Jan. 11.—Harry Payne Whitney, the hunter and explorer who was with Dr. Frederick Cook at Etah, and to whom Dr. Cook says he entrusted his records, declared last night at a local hotel that he would sail for the South Pole next July or August and will take with him Captain Bartlett, who accompanied Commander Peary on his search for the pole.

"I have selected none of my party except Captain Bartlett," said Mr. Whitney. "I will not go by the route being taken by Lieutenant Shackleton and his party of Britishers. We will sail from Cape Horn to Coates Land and then make our way over the ice as far south as possible."

OYSTER SUPPER TONIGHT

The ladies of the LaFayette Avenue Methodist church have everything in readiness for the oyster supper this afternoon and tonight and expect many to attend. They have secured the store house formerly occupied by the Goff Music Company and are selling oysters, in any style, candies, hot coffee and chocolate.

The proceeds of the sale will go to the piano fund of the church. Everybody is invited to attend.

near him, the first attempt being on his wife.

The officers went to the scene this afternoon and will bring him here tonight, where he will be placed in the county jail. He will then be turned over to the state insane asylum.

R. T. GODWIN IS SHOT BY DESPERATE NEGRO

WOUNDED AT SAME TIME R. S. MAYES WAS KILLED. NEGRO AT LARGE

Pensacola, Fla., Jan. 11.—With the arrival here of the body of R. S. Mayes, the turpentine operator who was killed by a negro at his turpentine camp in Washington county, came the news that R. T. Godwin, associated with Mr. Mayes in the business, is at the point of death, the victim of the deadly aim of the negro who killed Mr. Mayes.

The negro is at large with his name unknown and only a meager description of him in the hands of the officers. He fled to a section known as Point Washington, followed by officers who have little chance of overtaking him in the dense woodland section, but he cannot escape if the roads are guarded, owing to the rail and the bays surrounding the section.

According to the reports brought here of the tragedy by parties accompanying the body, the negro was in the employ of Mr. Mayes for a few days and appeared at the head quarters of the camp Monday morning and demanded pay for his time. He was told he would not be paid until the following day, the 10th, but refused to leave and insisted upon seeing Mr. Mayes. Finally the latter came out and was angry. He told the negro that he would settle with him, but that he would have to leave the camp, whereupon the negro drew a revolver and began firing. He shot Mr. Mayes, four times at close range and then turned the revolver on Mr. Godwin, inflicting what is believed to be a mortal wound, the bullet entering the abdomen.

Mrs. A. B. Kersey, who has been in the city a few days has returned to Atlanta, to attend the bedside of her husband, who has been seriously ill for several months. Mr. Kersey at present is reported to be doing better and has missed his fever.

ESCAPED CONVICT RETURNS TO PRISON

Wetumpka, Ala., Jan. 11.—The intense longing to again see his wife and children and his mother, more than 80 years of age, induced Can Pate, a white convict to run away from the penitentiary and brave the perils of the falls and rapids of the Coosa river.

Pate was sent up for life from Pickens county and since his incarceration his family had moved to Tuscaloosa county, so after his long and perilous journey down the river he had a long jaunt across the country to Tuscaloosa.

About four years ago Can Pate was convicted of murder and sentenced to imprisonment for life. So patient a convict did he prove that the warden made him a "trustee," and he was put in charge of the cow lot. One day in December about 12 o'clock, the warden of the state's cows was nowhere to be found. Track dogs were brought into requisition and Pate was traced to the Coosa river, where he had entered a boat.

Recorded on Books

After searching both sides of the Coosa river for miles, and no trace being found of the escaped convict, the prison record was opened and opposite Can Pate's name the word, "Escaped," was entered, the officials hoping some day to locate and capture the fugitive as he was the only "escapee" of recent years.

Last Monday the prison officials were astonished to see their man walk in to take up the burdens of a life sentence within prison walls.

The Coosa river is full of dangerous places for an inexperienced boatman and it is remarkable that Pate was not drowned, as his frail craft, half filled with water, was whirled about by the rapids.

Just above Wetumpka are some falls in which many lives have been lost but Pate's longing to see his loved ones made him blind to danger, and wet to the skin, he shot safely through the rough water. Landing about ten miles below Wetumpka he abandoned his boat and walked home.

After spending the Christmas holidays with his family, Pate returned to the brick walls which a jury of twelve men have decreed shall be his home for life, and he is again caring for the state's cows, his marvelous journey down the river and his happy Christmas holidays being now merely a memory.

FULLER McCANTS HURT.

Last Saturday morning Ramsey Metcalf and Fuller McCants were lining some hauling with a two mule team near town, Fuller driving and reaching down to get the lines which he had carelessly dropped he touched one of the mules, causing it to jump, throwing the young man off the wagon and between the mules. Upon being jacked up it was found that one of the mules had stepped on his head and bruised him up considerably. He was brought to town where he was given surgical attention, and at this writing is resting very well. Although painful, his hurts are not serious and he will be able to be out in a few days.—Hartford Independent.

Jack Gleason Offers a Purse of $50,000 for Twenty Round Bout in London

Chicago, Jan. 11.—H. H. Frazer, a local promoter, and Jack Gleason, who aided in arranging the Jeffries-Johnson fight, tonight offered a purse of $50,000 for a twenty round bout between Johnson and Al Kaufman, the San Francisco heavy-weight, to be fought in the new stadium in London, coronation week.

Kaufman has accepted the offer and the promoters expect to receive an answer from Johnson tomorrow. When a tentative offer was made Johnson here a month ago for a fight with Kaufman, the negro declared he would fight Kaufman any time a suitable purse was arranged.

NO LOBBYISTS FOR LEGISLATURE

Resolution Offered to Put Them Out—Was a Shot at Brooks Lawrence

Montgomery, Jan. 12.—(Special to the Eagle)—A resolution was offered in the house today to put all lobbyists from the floor of the legislature. It was supposed to be a shot at Brooks Lawrence, who was present at the time, but who quickly left the building. The representative of Pike county presented the resolution.

RESIDENCE OF R. T. GHENT IS ROBBED BY YOUTHFUL THIEF.

A negro boy giving his name as Will who has been in the employ of the family of R. T. Ghent on South St. Andrews street for the past several days made an unexpected departure yesterday afternoon and took with him several valuable articles belonging to his employers.

The negro was hired several days ago and gave his name as Will and it is by this name only he is known. He went to work as house boy and judging by his good work was thought to be an honest negro but later proved to be a crook.

The house was left in his care Tuesday afternoon and when the family returned home everything appeared to be in good shape so it was turned over to him again yesterday afternoon.

He was met by Mrs. Ghent running toward town yesterday afternoon and stated to her that he had received a message that his mother had died in Jacksonville and that he was trying to catch the Central train to go there.

She immediately phoned to town and when he applied to Ralph Ghent for his pay he was searched. It then developed he had stolen almost everything he could from a coat to a large assortment of sulphur matches.

He was allowed to go after the articles had been recovered but this morning a search was made of his room at a negro boarding house and several pairs of socks, a coat and a pair of trousers were found but the negro was gone.

The whole Ghent home was rummaged by the negro and it is not known just how much he did get in his raids.

Officers were put on the case, but owing to the fact that the negro was a stranger here he has not been identified and no arrests have been made.

The business of Dothan has started off with better speed this year than it usually does.

Good time for the improvement Club of Dothan to get in its work. What they do now will make a showing.

King Manuel is to take our advice and come to America. Don't know that the young man is looking for work, but is probably looking over a bargain list of American millionaires, if that is what they are called. He has come to the right place. He need not go any further, for he will find some young lady with enough money to pay running expenses, and if the girl's dad takes a liking to him, he may go over and buy up the throne and return it to him.

Dr. Hinds on the Boll Weevil

State Entomologist Hinds of Auburn expounds a great many fallacies concerning the boll weevil. He shows first that after the hibernation of the insect—after it is snugly sheltered for the winter—no cold weather that this latitude can furnish will as a rule kill it. If but 3 or 4 per cent of the hibernated insects survive the winter season the problem of fighting them in the warm season remains unchanged. Dr. Hinds shows, too, that the boll weevil can not be controlled by the use of powdered arsenate of lead or any other insecticide. Nor is late planting a possible remedy. There is in short no remedy except early planting of early maturing seeds, and the best of cultivation afterwards. The crop is to be hurried to maturity—that's all the remedy against the insect that is available.

But no, that is not all. The planting of corn and the making of meads needed in the state is the other remedy and it is the better one, too. The farmer who plants more corn and grows a lessened acreage of cotton highly fertilized and cultivated, is the farmer who will face the boll weevil successfully. The boll weevil calls, in other words, for intensive, better farming, and it may compel the farmer to do what he should have done long ago.—Birmingham Ledger.

Money Saver

One of the leading magazines contained an article the other day telling what a saving could be effected in towns of this size, by the installation of a fire department rig pulled by an automobile. The manufacturers of automobiles, are now building them for all purposes, from the small runabouts to the large trucks, and in the list, they build a machine specially designed for use in the fire departments.

We don't know the probable cost of one suited to the needs of Dothan, but we wouldn't be surprised if it wouldn't represent a saving of money.

The horses are expensive, to start off with, and the town bought the best that were offered. But the expense in buying a horse isn't started then, but it is the keeping of the horse. It is likely that it costs something like $15 a month to feed each of the city's fire horses. This expense continues, while the automobile would be costing nothing when there were no fires to go to. Then it would get to a fire much quicker, and result in saving more property than if the rig was pulled by horses. This is worth something to consider.

Probably a machine for Dothan's needs could be bought for $2,000, or $2,500, and if so, that would mean the saving for the town in time.

To say the least of it, the matter ought to be investigated before the town buys any more expensive horses, which are just as liable to die, or to be killed accidentally as any other horse, if not more so.

Exit Comer

A mighty shout is about to go up. Comer is soon to step down and out of the limelight of Alabama. Just how long he will stay out, could probably be best told by the political prognosticator of the Advertiser, who has already stated that Comer is down and out for good.

No man has ever drawn the lines closer than Comer has. He has put in friends of his in every instance where the pie was to be handed out, but we don't know but that he played the game according to the rules.

No man has ever come near accomplishing what he promised the people on the stump.

No man has probably retired with so little regrets from the people, and the state has never had so many laws passed under one man's power before.

Taken as a whole, his administration has had more good in it than bad. He stood for laws that were too drastic, and they will be modified, but you will see that the bulk of his laws will remain on the statute books, because they are laws that the people want.

All and all, Comer is a man of high prejudices, but we believe an honest man; a man who isn't appreciated now as he will be in the future.

There is a difference in the man who is retiring as governor and the one who came before the people eight years ago, with railroad data and tariff rates bulging from each pocket. The Comer of eight years ago spoke to small crowds of business men and farmers, wherever he could get them to listen. Many had never heard of him, but when they heard him through his argument, made in a conversational tone of voice, they saw that he was a man thoroughly posted on his subject. They voted for him as president of the railroad commission.

Later, when he came before us and told the same crowds that the other members of the railroad commission had him tied hog fashion, and he could do nothing, but thought he could accomplish something if they made him governor. It so happened before he got through with the governor's job that he had a legislature to his liking, and when he raised a forefinger and nodded, a bill went through like pension bills in congress.

He is not the same Comer of eight years ago, for he is a better speaker and a more skilled politician, but there are few men with a better grasp of public affairs. He has grown during his political career, not in popularity, for he played his trumps too fast. He rushed the prohibition amendment when many of his friends thought that it would have been best to give the prohibition laws a fuller tryout.

So he is going out, not under fire, particularly, but to make room for a man and political leaders who stand for many things Comer has opposed.

It is well that we have a change, for comparison is good for the state. The new administration will give the people many things they want. All will not be suited, but probably the most of them will get what they want. And by the time Mr. O'Neal steps down from the stage other issues will crowd themselves upon the people, and other talents will be developed. Age-Herald.

DREAD OF AN OPERATION

N. Manchester, Ind.—Mrs. Eva Bashore, of this place, says, "I suffered female misery of every description. Two doctors attended me, and advised an operation. I lost weight until I weighed only ninety pounds. I dreaded and operation, and instead, began taking Cardui. In a short time I gained 25 pounds, and feel as well as I ever did. Cardui, I am sure, saved my life." Cardui is today used in thousands of homes, where it relieves pain and brings back strength and ambition. It is a woman's medicine, and you are urged to try it for your troubles. Ask your druggist. He will tell you about Cardui.

Not Reliable.

Numberless are the stories told of George Washington, says the Housekeeper. Upon one occasion, while the American army was in camp, Washington heard that the colored sentries were altogether reliable. He determined to test the matter for himself. One night therefore, when the pass word was out and walked up to a colored sentry.

"Who goes there?" cried the sentinel.

"A friend," was the reply.

"Advance, friend, and give the countersign."

"Roxburgh," said Washington.

"No, sah," replied the soldier.

"Medford," said Washington.

"No, sah," was the response.

"Charleston," said Washington.

The sentry lost patience. "I tell you Massa Washington," he said, emphatically, "no man can go by here without he say 'Cambridge.'"

Typical Case of "Jane."

The experience of "Jane," recorded in a letter to the Star, printed this morning, is doubtless that of many sensitive women. When Jane set up housekeeping ten years ago she soon discovered she hadn't money enough to give elaborate dinner parties. She felt that she couldn't repay in kind the invitations of her wealthier friends, so she dropped out. As she puts it, she couldn't play the social game the way her friends were playing it, so she felt she had no business to stay in.

The trouble with Jane and other disappointed ones, is a failure to see things in perspective. They get values mixed. Some people have a foolish notion that the possession of motor cars and other luxuries somehow has a magical effect in transforming human nature. They get the idea that people who have all these things don't need friends and belong in a world apart. Nothing could be further from the truth.

There was no reason why Jane should not have continued to repay social obligation with invitations to dinners of her own cooking, or with little bridge parties. Her friends doubtless enjoyed coming to see her. If they were persons of ordinary sense—and presumably they were—they did not expect her to do what she obviously couldn't. Indeed, there is nothing more ill-bred, nothing that makes guests more uncomfortable, than a strain to do more than one can afford.

Where Jane failed was in the excessive modesty that made her think that her friends would care more for flowers and tableware and elaborate dinners than they did for her. She may even have made them ill at ease by her apologies when she had nothing to apologize for. Eventually they may have decided that they were making Jane unhappy, just as she was embarrassing them. So they may have let her drop out without protest.

This is only speculation as far as Jane's particular case is concerned. But her experience is so typical that it can be analyzed with confidence. The pity is that so many Janes are needlessly making themselves unhappy and shutting themselves off from friends whom they ought to have simply from a false notion of human nature. A superfluity of money is the merest incident.

People are "just folks" after all.

Future of Electricity.

"Many great problems," said Thomas A. Edison recently, "have been solved during the past few years, principally by the application of electricity, but even a more notable achievement is the advancement of surgery to the stage in which it is now practiced in the Rockefeller institute.

"The vacuum house cleaner is a great gift to the home and a boon to health. There have been many new electrical cooking vessels perfected. The propelling of street cars by storage batteries is a distinct step forward in this field. The progress that has been made in the building trades by the use of cement has been of great benefit and gives promise of better, safer and cheaper buildings in the future.

"The use of cement for building concrete bridges, sewers and subway walls has increased wonderfully, and will go forward more rapidly by the use of steel models for this work. Blaw & Co. of Pittsburgh, are working their steel plant night and day filling orders for these models. They are my invention, and by their use bridges, houses and other structures can be built at a saving of about 75 per cent, and the models can be used over and over again.

"I am perfecting the speaking pictures," continued Mr. Edison. "These pictures re-enact perfectly any event caught by the camera. For instance, Colonel Roosevelt will be shown life-size on the screen delivering a speech, his words being reproduced clear and distinct. I hope to have a demonstration of the speaking pictures in New York during the coming summer.

"I am also working on color photography. This is a long, hard pull, but I am going to perfect it. I do not expect to accomplish anything definite in color photography for a year at least, as I can devote only a part of my time to the subject at present."

—New York American.

Forgetting Himself.

An elderly gentleman, who knew something of law, lived in an Irish village where no lawyers had ever penetrated, and was in the habit of making the wills of his neighbors, says an exchange.

At an early hour one morning he was aroused from his slumber by a knocking at his gate, and, putting his head out of the window, he asked who was there.

"It's me, your honor—Paddy Flaherty. I could not get a wink of sleep, thinking of the will I made."

"What's the matter with the will?" asked the lawyer.

"Matter, indeed!" replied Pat. "Shure, I've not left myself a three-legged stool to sit upon."

A Shock for the Queen.

Princess de Montgion, of Paris who came to America to exhibit her beautiful and famous collies at several kennel shows, according to the New York Sun, said at a dinner in New York apropos of an embarrassment:

"That reminds me of a story told about Queen Alexandra of England.

"The Guards' Band was playing on the terrace at Windsor Castle during luncheon, and the Queen was so pleased with a lively march that she sent a maid of honor to inquire what it was.

"The maid of honor blushed deeply as she answered, on her return:

"'Come Where the Boode is Cheaper,' your majesty."

A GREAT INVENTION.

In recent times the people of Scotland have not distinguished themselves in the field of invention. They have concentrated nothing to the perfection of ships, telephones, or other useful things. This seemed strange, because a century or so ago the Scotch were identified with most of the great inventions and improvements of machinery and engineering.

However the grand old country has shaken off her apathy. It were, and it remained for one of her citizens to invent a pipe that promises to revolutionize smoking. The trouble with briar and meerschaum pipes and other common kinds, is that they become as strong as Hackschmidt and a man who carries "him" attracts the attention of the health authorities. Nicotine accumulates in the bowl, and stem, and the smoker poisons himself gradually, and finally dies in horrible agony, and is buried in the ally without benefit of clergy.

Some Scotchman, whose name has not yet been given to the public, compounded some sort of material that makes the ideal pipe. It looks like clay, it isn't clay. It is porous and absorbs the nicotine, and the pipe is always dry. The man who smokes it is always wondering where the juice goes to. He becomes so absorbed in speculations of this kind that he neglects his work, and annoys his family, and is finally sent to the poorhouse because he has no visible means of support.

This remarkable pipe colors up like a meerschaum, and the more you smoke it the better it tastes. Thus smoking becomes a pleasure instead of a disagreeable duty. The country is full of men who smoke nearly all the time, in order to protect their families from deadly germs. They groan under the burden, but, with Spartan heroism, they keep on smoking, fearing that their loved ones would fall victims to glanders or appendicitis if they quit. Only those who have suffered and endured for the protection of others can understand the self-sacrifice of these noble men. However, this new Scotch pipe comes to them with healing in its wings, so to speak. Hereafter they can smoke all day long, and snuff bed-time in the evening, and find it a pastime rather than an ordeal.

As nobody is paying for this advertisement, no further particulars can be given concerning this truly admirable pipe. It is sufficient to know that as soon as the discovery was made abroad an American went over to Scotland and bought up the invention, and the inventor too, and it may be feared that Scotia will get little credit for this latest triumph.—Exchange.

A well known Boston physician was on his way to his office one winter morning when the sidewalks were a glare of ice. While going down the streets he met a lady coming in the opposite direction. The lady was a stranger to him, although he was not unknown to her.

In trying to avoid each other on the icy pavement they both slipped and came to the sidewalk facing each other, with their pedal extremities considerably entangled. While the police doctor was debating in his mind what was the proper thing to do under the trying circumstances the problem was solved by the quick-witted lady, who quietly remarked:

"Doctor, if you will be good enough to rise and pick up your legs, I will take what remains."

MR. AND MRS. FARMER
RETURN

Mr. and Mrs. Alex J. Farmer returned yesterday afternoon from Augusta, Ga., where they have been since Monday night, when they were married at the home of the bride's parents in that city.

The groom is clerk and treasurer of the Dothan Whitley Dry Goods Company in this city, and is well known.

The bride, before marriage, was Mrs. Luma McManis, and although she was originally from Augusta, has made Dothan her home for the past year. She was connected with the Farm & Whitley Company for many months.

The couple have made many friends in this city during their stay here, who wish them all happiness.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank each and everyone of our friends for the kind administrations and words of sympathy to our family during the sickness and death of our mother. We shall always feel kindly indebted for their thoughtfulness.

GOT THE WRONG COW

Oscar Green sold Port Fordham of Webb a cow the other day. She was in Oscar's lot, and the went up and looked at her.

Yesterday, Port sent for the cow, but the boy got in the wrong lot and drove out the wrong cow. The boy turned out and drove off Mr. J. L. Crawford's fancy $109 cow, and never knew the difference till five miles in the country, where the cow gave out and had to be killed.

At night, at milking time last night the mistake was discovered, and some telephone brought matters straight saying Port the difference between a $17.50 beef cow and one of those fancy town milk cows.

MISS DOUGLAS ENTERTAINS AT LUNCHEON

Those present were Miss Elizabeth, of Dothan, Miss Louise Ellis, Mrs. Henry Lutz, Mrs. Lutz Lutz, Miss Evelyn Parks, Miss Corinne Gilmore, Miss Leon Carroll and Miss Temple Smith. Troy Messenger.

COLD AS A HAIR TONIC

The latest "universal hair grower" discovered is a trip to the Arctic regions, or failing time and inclination for that, employment in a cold storage company. According to Sir Earnest Shackleton, the Antarctic explorer, extreme cold is one of the best means of strengthening the hair. In the course of an interview recently Sir Earnest said:

"All of the men who went with me on the south pole expedition with one or two exceptions possessed stronger crops of hair on their return to civilization."

"Extreme cold undoubtedly strengthens one's hair. As our party approached nearer the south pole our hair grew more slowly, but became thicker and stronger."

An Official of a London cold storage company, interviewed on the same subject, stated that there was not a baldheaded man in the employ of the company. He said that the men worked all day in a temperature of 20 degrees of frost and the cold undoubtedly made their hair thicker.

Mother, we simply can't have that horrible Mrs. Westley at our musicale. She is impossible," said the girl, according to the Chicago Record Herald. "She has the manners of a cowgirl, and she never goes anywhere without insulting somebody."

"I know she is a very vulgar person, but we can't get along without her."

"I don't see why."

"Well, look over the list of women who are coming. There isn't one of them who doesn't size up a drawing roomful of ladies by the clothes they wear. To make the affair a success we must have the best dressed women in town, and Mrs. Westley's gowns are always the finest that money can buy."
